III. LCC BAS-OLTM Overview & Industry Trends, Gaps, & Updates

Program Overview:

LCC's Goal: Providing Bachelor's opportunities for multiple industries, creating paths for individuals to return to school to advance into leadership roles.

15 feeder programs lead into the OLTM program, which started in 2020.

Cohort 4 is the most recent cohort, with 30 students per cohort.

Retention: The OLTM program has the highest level of retention among programs at LCC.

Advisory Committee: Meets twice a year to provide input on program relevance. Industry partners help identify essential skills to integrate into the curriculum. Committee also hosts Leadership After Hours events for networking.

The program has undergone several schedule transitions to determine the most manageable option for students, including full-time, part-time, hybrid, in-person, and online formats.

All program development, focus group materials, and mappings are available on Google Drive.

IV. Industry Feedback:

Mark: Suggested tracking the career progression of OLTM graduates to see where they are now.

Susan: As a graduate, Susan shared that while she already knew where she was going post-graduation, many other students did not have resources for job placement and searching.

Craig: Advocated for internships to help students network with industry professionals.

Teedara: Recommended bringing in industry professionals to discuss job expectations and practice interviews. Also noted the growing relevance of AI training and compliance in the workforce.

Tamra: Discussed LCC's current efforts to define its AI philosophy and how the school plans to navigate AI's role in education and the workplace.

Kat: Stated that many Perry graduates currently in the OLTM program are employed by major local employers, and some have gone on to graduate school.

Teedara: Shared her recent experience of hiring 52 people in the past two years. Mentioned that retention challenges are being addressed through projects aimed at understanding younger generations' workplace preferences.

Susan: Highlighted the potential to address stressors that contribute to high turnover in leadership positions.

Craig: Discussed the importance of resource fairs, where LCC representatives could reach employees in their workplace. He also talked about his company's success transitioning from newsprint to recycling, producing containerboard and mixed paper, and replacing plastic with paper.

Mark: Commented on the post-COVID economic recovery in Kalama. The Kalama student store, run by students from the CTE class, is thriving and has grown significantly, reaching over $15,000 in sales last month. However, they're still struggling to find a permanent anchor restaurant.

Monica: Noted that commercial lending has become more difficult, with banks reluctant to approve loans. She also discussed the "silver tsunami", where businesses face challenges with succession planning as younger generations are often not interested in taking over family businesses. Suggested exploring programs to help employees jointly purchase businesses and ensure local ownership rather than corporate buyouts.

Tricia: Noted the challenges of retaining younger employees, who may not fully understand the expectations of the roles they enter and may leave after realizing they are not a good fit.

Mark: Mentioned that while his company is not currently running a training program, it is prepared to do so when necessary.
